

To the Federal Communications Commission

Please do not weaken Indiana's Do Not Call list.

Americans are so bombarded with appeals to spend or donate money. Can we please have a telephone in our homes without being abused with it? Surely citizens can be allowed some small margin of defense against ever-favored business which mauls us to death. When others seek to gain at my expense—invade my home, disturb my family and use the phone I pay for to make a profit—my constitutional rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are compromised. They have other means to exploit me. Please stop the madness!!

When a company or a charity solicits into my home on the telephone, I tell them they forfeited any possibility of my business with that call. If the federal government is responsible for more solicitation calls into my home, I will run my own email campaign urging others to use the same stock answer: IT IS OUR POLICY TO REFUSE ANY SOLICITATION THAT COMES IN ON OUR HOME PHONE, and hang up.
